Subject: Time to Set Position Limits on Silver

Ted Butler has been proposing setting position limits on Silver for a long time now. His 1% solution for silver is proposed here:
 http://www.24hgold.com/english/news-gold-silver-fair-simple-and-sound.aspx?contributor=Theodore+Butler&article=3113141916G10020&redirect=False
This solution is consistent with the position limits that now exist for almost all other commodities (except gold, which should also have similar position limits set for it) of finite supply.

In reviewing Ted's proposal I find that it is quite reasonable. I would add that it is important that position limits be set for both LONG and SHORT trades. AND the position limits need to be enforced. We need to have reasonable rules established again so that investors can get back into the market with confidence that the market is fair and transparent.

Thanks for listening,

Heinz
